The billionaire continued, “Woh samay beet gaya, jab bachhe sirf buzurgo ki baat sunte the [The days when children simply followed whatever their elders said are over] . And honestly, that’s not a bad thing. This generation has ideas and is also more responsible, sensible, and creative than we give them credit for.”

He expressed how he is learning new things while working with Gen Z employees. “And the more time I spend around them, the more I’m learning that curiosity is really the best way to bridge gaps between people. Instead of expecting them to become more like us, maybe we need to be more like them.”

“On that note, maybe it’s time I give these sleep tracking apps a try. Will keep you updated on how it goes.”

Agarwal announced the tragic news on X. A part of his tweet, posted on January 7, read, "Today is the darkest day of my life. My beloved son, Agnivesh, left us far too soon. He was just 49 years old, healthy, full of life, and dreams. Following a skiing accident in the US, he was recovering well in Mount Sinai Hospital, New York. We believed the worst was behind us. But fate had other plans, and a sudden cardiac arrest snatched our son away from us."
