Macron and Ardern meet Twitter, Facebook, Google on hate speech

BLOOMBERG Paris, May 15

THE LEADERS of France and New Zealand led a summit with representatives of major global technology companies in Paris Wednesday, as governments and Silicon Valley grapple with containing hate speech and incitement to violence on the internet. French President Emmanuel Macron and New Zealand Prime Minister Jacinda Ardern, were joined by leaders from the UK and Canada and others to approve a push dubbed the "Christchurch Call." The US withheld a formal endorsement on concerns about restricting free speech.

Attendees, including representatives from Facebook, Twitter and Alphabet, pledged to use and develop laws, algorithms and direct intervention to curb the promotion, amplification and distribution of violent expression content" or to promote "credible and positive alternatives or counter-narratives," according to an embargoed version of the call. Twitter chief executive officer Jack Dorsey, Facebook vice president for global affairs and communications Nick Clegg and Google chief legal officer Kent Walker attended the meeting, according to the French president's office.

"At the end of the day, everyone will be judged on their actions," Ardern told a media in an interview published Wednesday.

Attendees also included UK Prime Minister Theresa May, Canadian Prime Minister Justin Trudeau, Irish Premier Leo Varadkar and Jordan's King Abdullah II, as well as representatives from Amazon, Microsoft and Vivendi's Sully Motion.

The White House said that while the US is "not currently in a position to join the endorsement," we continue to support the overall goals reflected in the call. We continue to be proactive in our efforts to counter terrorist content online while also continuing to respect freedom of expression and freedom of the press.

extremist who'd posted racist manifests online and then live-streamed his rampage. Facebook and Alphabet's YouTube were widely criticized for failing to quickly remove the video. Companies and states pledged to endorse the initiative that includes transparent reporting of incidents, research of "technical solutions to prevent" the upload and dissemination of hate speech, the use of algorithms to "redirect users from terrorist and trism on social media platforms. The initiative isn't legally binding. The call comes after the March 15 mosque shootings in Christchurch, New Zealand, in which 51 people were killed by a right-wing

Open to expanding US Supreme Court, says Kamala Harris

BLOOMBERG Washington, May 15

DEMOCRATIC PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATE Kamala Harris said on Wednesday she's open to expanding the US Supreme Court, saying Republicans are creating a "crisis of confidence" in the nation's highest court. "I am interested in having that conversation in having that conversation," the California senator said in Nashville, New Hampshire, in response to a question about whether she favors adding as many as four seats to the court. "I'm open to this conversation about increasing the number of people on the United States Supreme Court."

She said she's also interested in applying term limits to the court and limiting the number of nominees for any particular president. Harris's remarks reflect growing tensions by progressive activists to combat Republican efforts to reshape the federal courts with young conservatives, which has been one of President Donald Trump's most significant actions. Many Democrats remain angry with Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell for refusing to allow a hearing on President Barack Obama's Supreme Court nominee in 2016 and holding the seat open for Trump to fill with Justice Neil Gorsuch, whom they trust the liberal judicial advocacy group Demand Justice, said Wednesday's comments are "a welcome signal from Harris' amid efforts in conservative states to create a court case that could overturn the Roe v. Wade abortion rights ruling."

Trump to delay auto tariffs amid EU, Japan trade talks

BLOOMBERG Washington, May 15

PRESIDENT DONALD TRUMP is poised to delay a decision by up to six months to impose auto tariffs to avoid slowing up negotiations with the EU and Japan and further antagonize allies as he ramps up his trade war with China, according to people close to the decisions.

Trump faces a May 18 deadline to proceed with his threat to slap a tariff of as much as 25% on imported cars and parts in the name of US national security. The news was welcomed by an equities market that has been battered by renewed trade concerns since last week. GM deferred comment on the tariff decision to delay to industry representatives, while Ford declined to comment and Fiat Chrysler could be immediately reached. Trump, who is due to make a state visit to Japan later this month, remains the wild card, according to people close to the discussion. Trump and a small group of aides including Commerce Secretary Wilbur Ross and trade adviser Peter Navarro are seen to be in favour of the new import duties against the advice of other advisers. But people close to the discussions say even advocates of tariffs are still debating the scope of any action, complicating the discussions. Other advisers including US Trade Representative Robert Lighthizer, who is leading the ne-negotiations with the EU and Japan, have been urging Trump to postpone a decision, according to administration officials and other people familiar with the deliberations. At a White House meeting on Tuesday officials firm up the decision to delay tariffs for up to 180 days, according to two people familiar with the deliberations. Spokespeople for Ross and Lighthizer did not immediately respond to a request for comment, and the White House declined to comment.

Trump last year ordered a Commerce Department investigation into whether imported cars and parts posed a threat to US national security and he was presented with a final report laying out a series of recommendations in February. The findings weren't publicly released. According to people who have seen the report, the justification for auto tariffs is not that the imports of vehicles and auto parts pose a real threat to national security, but that the portion they contribute to the overall US trade deficit that could cause harm.
