

● AT 120% OF 10-YEAR AVERAGE

Water levels comfortable in reservoirs, except in the east

SANDIP DAS
New Delhi, April 20

WATER LEVELS IN India's reservoirs have dropped to a level 5% below last year's record high, amid lingering concerns over heat waves in many parts of the country and monsoon rainfall being seen to be just about the normal level. However, no large impact of this on the summer crops is likely, as the stored water is still much above the 10-year average, and is seen to be sufficient to irrigate the rain-fed swathes of agriculturally important regions. However, if the monsoon turns out to be below average, as predicted by private forecaster Skymet, the eastern region could face water scarcity and crop damage.

According to Central Water Commission data, the water level of the country's 143 reservoirs stood at 68.88 billion cubic metres (bcm) on Thursday, which is 38% of their combined capacity. A year ago, the water available in these reservoirs was 70.30 bcm, and the average of the last 10 years was 59.96 bcm. "Current water level of reservoirs is 38% of their live storage capacity of the corresponding period of last year and 120% of the storage of the average of the last 10 years," the CWC stated.

Of the reservoirs whose water levels are monitored by the CWC, 112 are located in the west, central and southern regions.

However, water levels in major dams in the eastern regions, especially in West Bengal, Bihar, Jharkhand and Odisha, have dropped below last year's as well as the last 10-year-average level. In these states, a large segment of the crop area is still rain-fed.

West Bengal, the biggest rice-producing state in the country, has irrigation coverage of only 51%, which may be impacted if monsoon rains become deficient. Areas under pulses and oilseeds in Maharashtra, Madhya Pradesh and Karnataka also depend on the monsoon in a big way.

The India Meteorological Department predicted rainfall at 96% of the long period average, while precipitation between 96-104% is treated as "normal". Water reservoirs were filled to a record 87% of their capacities after the end of an above-normal monsoon season on September 30, 2022.
